

My Mission Statement

With God at the center of my life and trusting in God's love, I will fear nothing and no one. I will always remember to whom I belong.

Grateful for the precious gift of each day, I will live as if this were my last day – fully, generously, and courageously. Each day, I will give away at least one tangible thing as a sign of my gratefulness and my desire to be free.

I will be devoted, loyal, and faithful to my family and loved ones. I will make time each day for the significant people in my life.

I will be fully present to those who come my way, treating each with reverence, sensitivity, and kindness, so that all will be enriched who encounter me.

I will treat God's creation with reverence and gentleness.

I will pause often to dream, live proactively, use God's gifts to expand my circle of influence, listen more empathetically.

I will make time to study, exercise, love, and lift up my life to the God who loves me.

I will approach life with a spirit of openness, speaking less and listening more, taking the risk of being changed by new paradigms.

In all ways, I strive to live with honesty, integrity, simplicity, and humility.